The first thing education teaches us is to walk alone. After taking the first step away from the crowd, we realize the benefits of making our own decisions. Our personalities come through in what we choose to do rather than in what we are required to do. Each person develops individual qualities. It is the combination of these which gives N.T.E. its distinct identity. After all, the value of New Trier is nothing more than the value of the students composing it.

The interesting aren't always the obvious. — M. K. Breuer

The measure of a man's real character is what he would do if he knew he never would be found out. — Thomas Babington Macaulay

If you have talent and work hard and long, anything in the world can be yours — if you have money. — Anonymous

Laughter is a tranquilizer with no side effects. — Arnold Glasow

Do it now! There may be a law against it tomorrow. — Anonymous

Life is just a bowl of pits.
— Rodney Dangerfield

It's hard for the modern generation to understand Thoreau, who lived beside a pond but didn't own water-skis or a snorkel. — Bill Vaughan

Experience is simply the name we give our mistakes.
— Oscar Wilde

You can always tell a real friend; When you've made a fool of yourself he doesn't feel you've done a permanent job. — Laurence J. Peter

What a long strange trip it's been. — The Grateful Dead

At first glance, New Trier appears to be nothing more than a maze of stairways and hallways. But once we are able to make our own way beyond the doors of illusion, we see that the doors of perception have been opened. We uncover the infinite opportunities that lie within each classroom.

Do not pass English. Do not collect diploma. Go directly to summer school. What originally seems to be an administrative monopoly on the courses we must take, eventually opens up and assures us that our die has not been cast. From forensics to football we discover a field of complementary forms of education.

While exploring new channels of involvement, we may find ourselves tossed about like riders on a storm. It is then that we rely on our friends, parents, and teachers for guidance. Their insight gives us the strength we need to forge ahead. Refusing to succumb to rainy days and Monday morning breakfast clubs, we learn to rise and fall with the changing tides.

A student's work is never done . . . until the weekend. When Friday night finally rolls around, we shift gears and reverse our thoughts from American Studies to social studies. Free time signals an added opportunity for self-expression. Needing to prove our identities, we give ourselves license to participate in extracurricular activities.

When it comes to entertainment in Chicago, the sky's the limit. Switching from the North Shore to the Lake Shore, we find a wide spectrum of diversions to explore. Everything from the Blues to the Blackstone sets the stage for colorful experiences in our own second city.

There is no formula for the typical New Trier East student for one does not exist. We each vary from one another, but the sum of our differences results in a definite atmosphere that can only be found in the halls of NTE.

Social Service encouraged the young and the old and the hospitalized and the healthy to unite and walk together in friendship. During weekend adventures and mid week telephone calls, the participant and his counterpart discovered each other while discovering themselves. The organization fostered special feelings between individuals that could not be sought elsewhere. Within a few short months, relationships were established and both parties eagerly awaited their next encounter.

Using "You've Got a Friend" as this year's theme, Social Service quickly recruited over four hundred volunteers, the largest number in a decade. Co-heads Jessica Spring and Tom Meyers, along with sponsor Mr. Kroschel and the seventeen member board, oversaw the progress of the individual groups. Diversity prevailed as the board initiated programs with people from all walks of life. Students tutored city and suburban children, supplied compassion for young hospital patients, and provided attention for senior citizens in nursing homes. The two annual fund-raisers, the Battle of the Bands and the rummage sale, were extremely profitable, paying for the transportation and supplies needed to operate the organization. Social Service allowed people to follow the path that led to meaningful experiences.

Wide world of sports

With one minute left to go in the game, the quarterback fades back and throws a deep pass into the end zone. TOUCHDOWN! The teammates congratulate each other, overjoyed with the thrill of victory. An advisory has won another IM game.

IM provided the spirit of competition for the many people who chose not to participate in interscholastic sports. From football to racquetball and ping pong to pool, the intramural program offered something for everyone. IM sponsored such individual activities as the game-a-thon and the various advisory competitions held throughout the year.

These tournaments unified the advisory and helped the group strive for team work. Although the intramural program taught the student how to win, it also helped him cope with a loss. But win, lose, or tie, one thing was for sure: IM supplied it all.

Takin' care of business

Two national organizations, the Distributive Education Clubs of America and the Office Education Association, provided a way for students to begin their business careers. DECA enabled its members to obtain training in areas related to retail sales, while OEA participants worked to perfect their typing, filing, and shorthand.

DECA and OEA members attended classes in the morning and worked for assorted community firms in the afternoon. DECA students employed professional insight at their various occupations. Relying upon their business knowledge, these members assisted the Winnetka Thrift Shop by encouraging others to make donations. Similarly, OEA students utilized their general skills to lend helpful hands to many businesses. This organization also assisted in the training of students for the special olympics.

Applying their recently acquired abilities, DECA and OEA members successfully competed at the local, state, and national levels. These two programs offered the business-oriented student a course of study modified for his interests.

Brief cases

A New Trier debater reviews his argument. During countless hours of research, he has utilized the unlimited resources of the library and incorporated the information into one indisputable case. Confident with his preparation, he states his case in a brief eight minutes.

The 1980-81 debate topic was resolved: That the federal government should initiate and enforce safety guarantees on consumer goods. This resolution enabled the team to compose a broad range of cases from self-extinguishing cigarettes to safety regulations for motorcycle helmets. Anticipating the burden of proof, team members wrote to major companies seeking the support needed for the cases. The cooperation of these companies and the individual research provided ample material relevant to the subject.

President Bruce Dougherty shared his practical experience with both junior varsity and novice orators. The union of these three teams and the support of coach Thomas McClain helped the New Trier East forensics department complete a superb season.

Damsels in success

In the fall of nineteen hundred and nineteen, a group of girls assembled with the intention of establishing an organization to serve the school and community. This meeting marked the beginning of Girls' Club.

If a classman of the present day were to glance back at the past activities of Girls' Club, he would find a pattern of events similar to those of today. The students of the 1940's held Red Cross drives to aid the soldiers of World War II. A decade later students enjoyed the Daughter-Pop Dinner Hop which was changed to the Daddy Daughter Dinner Dance in the 1960's. Recently, Girls Club added candy bar sales to their list of fund raisers, supplying scholarships to seniors in financial need.

President Peggy Maguire scheduled various events to take place during the year. The scholarship drive took flight in early fall with the sale of New Trier East frisbees. To satisfy the appetites of the hungry football fans, Girls' Club sold hotdogs, popcorn, and taffy apples at home games. They collected canned foods and distributed them to families in Chicago making Thanksgiving a plentiful feast for all. The girls' advisories sold subscriptions in hopes of making the magazine drive the most profitable fund raiser ever.

Thursday morning rep meetings and tenth period board were times for announcements. Officers hung publicity posters outside the office door, proclaiming the arrival of another gala affair. The common goal of producing friendliness and enthusiasm united the girls of New Trier. Their voices echoed clearly above the crowd in a chorus of success.

Man power

Two score and fifteen years ago our brothers brought forth upon this school a club named Tri-Ship, created to further the development of citizenship, fellowship, and sportsmanship at New Trier. Continuing the tradition of earning money for boys' scholarships, the dedicated young men held many fundraisers throughout the year. The proceeds from the Christmas tree sale comprised the major part of the scholarship fund. Additional profitable activities were the Ice Cream Social, Casino Night, and Second City.

Tri-Ship also extended a hand into the city. The prosperous canned food drive enabled many urban families to have a happier holiday season. Students at East and West combined their efforts to reach the goal of 27,000 cans. This opportunity to share was a gratifying experience for all.

We, the students of New Trier East, should be proud and grateful for Tri-Ship's continuous contributions to the school and community. Thus, let it be highly resolved that these members have not labored in vain; that this club, under leaders such as Terence Barton and Dave Turner, shall continue to carry on its worthwhile endeavors for many years to come.

PEP CLUB (pep kluh) n. a group of students who meet for the common cause of promoting spirit throughout the school.

Once again Pep club had a beneficial year. Non-profit spirit raisers were scheduled on the agenda including the traditional congratulatory breakfasts for New Triers, hard working teams. Student morale was especially strong. President Susie Atkinson had high aspirations for the year, and she helped make them a reality.

The club's new ideas and fresh atmosphere resulted in great participation by enthusiastic freshmen. The large membership made cooperation essential. This was achieved by reweaving the three sections of board, pom-pom, and cheer. Miss Smith, the new board sponsor, became the first to take responsibility for bringing together these divisions. A closer and more powerful group resulted.

"I just hope that Pep club remains as strong in the future as it has been in the past," stressed Susie Atkinson, in anticipation of the East-West merger.

Speakers of the house

A gavel pounds a voice is heard. The meeting is called to order. Under President Don Alster and faculty sponsor Diane Stoewer, council members generated and implemented ideas throughout the year.

SC focused its attention on the East-West merger to help make a smooth student government transition. The combination of NTE and NTW Student Council representatives worked as one cohesive unit to write a constitution for future years. Students from both schools formed a committee of seventy, headed by NTE student Andy Cohen, to propose colors and a symbol for the new New Trier. The joint East-West effort on the Halloween party was a huge success, attracting over fifteen hundred students.

The uniting of two unique schools brought with it a number of organizational problems. The restructured NTE student government took a leadership role which helped break the ice for next year's Student Council.

Let us entertain you

If one were to describe a typical school day, adjectives such as "mundane," "wearisome," and "hectic" probably would not escape the list. An organization that helped revive students from the school day blues was the Educational Opportunities Committee. Crime prevention week, media week, and the Chicago Hustle basketball clinic were interesting as well as entertaining. And, they were NIE whatever student needed. The variety EOC's innovative schedule also included well-known political figures such as Richard Daley, Dave O'Neal, and John Porter.

Headed by Liza Malott and faculty sponsor Diane Stoewer, the organization maintained its diversity with programs such as Food day and the Make Over Fair, a one-day event where girls received "facials" free of charge from top beauticians. Through the effort of EOC, New Trier students were provided with exciting alternatives that were educational as well as fun.

We the students of New Trier East, in order to form a more perfect service, establish statistics, insure absolute accuracy, provide for unlimited sports, promote general swimming, and secure gymnastic ability to young students for their prosperity, do ordain and establish this promise to the township of New Trier

Sports service became an organization without which the school's athletic department could not function. Providing statisticians for football, mat maids for wrestling, and timers for swimming, the group was strongly appreciated. N.T. Guard, compiled of sophomores, juniors, and seniors, devoted its Saturday mornings to teaching young athletes and its Wednesday evenings to supervising family swims. Assisting with gymnastics, Gamma members also dedicated themselves to serving the community. As a result, the contributions of Sports service aided various organizations in achieving their goals

Clubhouse

New Trier East is more than just a school; it is an adventure. The four years of basic training during high school prepared the new recruits for the multitude of challenges ahead. In addition to classroom academics, the dismissal of the last class began another type of learning opportunity. Here sponsors did not ask for experience. They gave it. Participants did not read it from a book. They lived it.

In the beginning commanding officers drilled freshmen with the two words "get involved." The phrase gained numerous meanings as the students applied the concept of participation inside as well as outside the school.

The first year of training allowed the recruits to explore the various extracurricular activities that surrounded the campus. As sophomores, the students had established a confident rank among their peers and were ready to march directly into action. Juniors and seniors recognized the importance of their organizations and assumed the responsibility of leadership throughout the year.

Those who wished to sharpen their minds with the weapon of intelligence participated in Math club.

Four senior officers, Carl Larson, Nick Shapiro, Barry Waterman, and Eric Yuen led students through different types of regional, state, and national contests. Attacking their problems with positive results, clubbers discussed the strategy for solving complex equations. Letting their fingers do the work, Computer club members programmed the minds of the future with the knowledge of modern technology. Though dormant for a period of five years, the Amateur Radio club was brought back to life by the amazing Mr. Brix. These Radiotes hold meetings to discuss the operation and maintenance of a radio.

A language barrier was one obstacle that did not hinder the students of New Trier. Foreign language classes offered individuals the chance to apply their skills in a casual, after-school environment as well as at the National competitions. Among the annual activities planned by the Latin Club were the Roman Banquet and the Praeco Publications. To better understand the German people and culture, the members of German Club wrote and published the magazine, Schreiberei.

(Ryden, McCook, Ryden, Mr. Brix, S. Pick, Ryder)

Non-academic clubs paved the way for better human relations between the student body and the community. The Minority Student Association promoted positive alliances between the minority and the majority. HERO, Home Economics Related Occupations, a business oriented organization, offered students occupational preparation and consumer skills. To fulfill the required community service project, the fourth period HERO group chose to visit a Chicago nursery and day care center. Bridging the communication gap between different countries, the American Field Service sent New Trier East students Dan Coven and Paula Carlson abroad and sponsored parties to welcome foreign exchange students. Willing to give their services freely, student tutors realized the advantage of a one-to-one teaching tactic. The head of Student Tutoring, Peggy Laport, understood the necessity of the program for those having trouble in certain subjects. Open to sophomores, juniors and seniors, the Forensics/DANTE group discovered literature through performance. The members met twice a week to prepare productions, plays, poems, speeches and prose readings.

Students sharing an interest in fun and games formulated various small clubs of their own. New Trier's select bridge fanatics spent part of their free time participating in the prestigious Bridge club. The school's more intellectual students took pleasure in the challenging and rewarding Chess club. As a result of much practice, clubbers perfected basic strategies and maneuvers which paid off in league meets and tournaments. For the sake of argument, members of Conflict Simulation club recreated historical and hypothetical conflicts in a gaming medium. The creative and imaginative often became involved in Dungeons and Dragons, a role play game of nation-wide recognition. Individuals with a flair for fantasy formed Science Fiction club. Functions of the year included attending Star Trek conventions, holding a science fiction fair, and conducting a book exchange.

For an education extending beyond papers, books, quizzes, and tests, students looked to the clubs emphasizing appreciation of the great outdoors. Hosting club welcomed anyone possessing a desire to enjoy the beauty of the great nature. Club officers Jim Watson, Tom Applegate, and Tom McCook, along with sponsor Zach Lazar, organized numerous week-end expeditions into various parts of Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan, and Illinois. By the end of the year, the club's eighty members had attempted if not perfected the arts of cross country skiing, bicycling, canoeing, rock climbing, and camping. Obsessed with the mystery of the heavens, Astronomy club fought the wind and the weather in order to observe the latest celestial thrills and cosmic chills. On the road to further scientific knowledge, Biology clubbers listened attentively to various guest speakers. The real attraction, however, lay in the nature-oriented Saturday field trips. Finally, Frisbee club offered a purely non-academic activity where participants were able to enjoy a comfortable, informal, and yet competitive environment.

The clubs at New Trier offered an opportunity for students with the same interests to gather together in a relaxed atmosphere where they could stand at

ATHLETICS

In the opening minutes New Trier sports were widely received as one of the hallmarks of the school. As the game progressed, girls' athletics came into play. Soccer, boys' lacrosse, and girls' cross country joined Indian forces and pushed on the scoring drive. All teams kicked off the second half with a line of awards to back them up. Little time remained on the clock when officials made a controversial call that affected the traditional game plan: West players would be introduced the following season. Nevertheless, the spirit of the green and gray lived on long after the final gun sounded.

Ever since New Trier's inception in 1901, the school has established a tradition of excellence both in the classroom and on the playing field. The Indian football team, fielding one of the toughest teams in the conference, has never been an exception. This fall, the last New Trier East football squad upheld this lofty tradition.

The Indian defense, as Coach Cichowski had expected, proved to be the core of a tenacious, well-rounded Indian squad. The NTE mentor placed his trust in returning defensive ends Morgan Herron and Ed Harney to contain outside threats, while relying on the excellence of the returning linebacking duo of Greg Beck and Harold Phillips.

The offense as well as the defense proved its ability in the first four games. Scalping their opponents by a combined score of 148-3, the Indians dominated both sides of the gridiron. Though the state's top team was heralded by fans and opponents alike, not even the NTE defense could prevent the setback which befell the team. A disagreement between the Teacher's Association and the Board of Education forced the rescheduling of the Indian homecoming game with Maine South. However, this did not deter captains Ernie Roth, Greg Beck and Dan Clark from holding practices. These practices proved to be an asset as the Indians vanquished the Deerfield Warriors the following Saturday. The squad remained undefeated but lost Phillips, Clark, and quarterback Mike Huff to injuries. The importance of these players was evident in the next game, a heartbreaking 6-7 loss to St. Viator. Coach Cichowski commented that "Sure the injuries hurt us but a good football team should still win with three guys out." And win they did! In a game which would decide the conference championship, the NTE team traveled to Evanston. The Wildkits fought a tough battle but could not overcome a fierce Indian attack

NT needed one more victory to clinch the conference title and the all important spot in the playoffs. By defeating Maine South, the Indians captured the title and secured a state playoff position. After an anti climactic victory against Waukegan West, the Indians were on the warpath to Gordon Tech

On a clear and sunny Wednesday afternoon, more than one thousand loyal NT fans traveled to Lane Tech Stadium to watch their Indians battle the Gordon Tech Rams. The first half was marked by fierce defense from both sides. However, a second quarter Tech touchdown put a damper on the Indian spirit. A fired up Indian squad soon came out for the second half but could not penetrate a tough Gordon Tech defense. Gordon's late fourth quarter touchdown put an end to an extremely productive season and an era of tradition; it was the tradition of NTE alive. Powered by a strong line and swift backs, the A's recorded a fine season. This was matched by an extremely tough Freshman B team which finished the season with an unscathed record. Smart, heads-up football was the key to the B team's success. This freshman experience will undoubtedly pay off as the Class of '84 ascends into higher levels of football competition and begins a new tradition at a new New Trier.

Pacemakers

Ending its second full season of competition, the girls cross-country team once again proved its adeptness. The squad dashed relentlessly toward victory. Winning all but one dual meet, the "hurry back girls" placed third in the Central suburban league. Captain Carol Onley aided her team with solid leadership and Bill Stewart inspired them with spirited coaching. Assisting the team in their conquests, junior Nancy Leahy exhibited outstanding effort. Runners Amy Bekken, Gretchen Hinkamp, Julie Morand, and Liz Spitek provided the squad with the depth that enabled them to triumph over the opposition. An enthusiastic and fresh attitude allowed them to endure fatigue and to overcome their competitors. This mixing of psyche and stamina was the fuel which kept the machine in good running condition.

Golf is a unique sport which combines both power and finesse. Before he may deem himself "up to par," the average golfer must master the powerfully stroked drive as well as the delicately hit chip.

"Up to par" appropriately describes the performance of the New Trier East boys' golf team. Hindered by inclement weather and inconsistent play, the squad commenced the season under adverse conditions. However, as the skies cleared, sheer persistence and diligent practice produced valuable experience and sharpened skills. Led by the exemplary performance of seniors Jay Dempsey, Andy Burns, and Art Ellis, the team posted impressive victories over Mt. Prospect and Deerfield. Unfortunately, the season came to an abrupt halt as the conflict between the board of education and the teachers' association forced the district-bound golfers to forfeit their last matches. This prevented the Indians from fulfilling their dreams of venturing downstate.

The Freshman-Sophomore team distinguished itself by prevailing in every match in which they participated. Under the watchful eye of coach Earl Metzger, stars David Andrew and Steve O'Brvan maintained the high caliber of play associated with New Trier East golf.

She is reassured by her progress. Confident with her results, she joins her team to face competition.

Team spirit was not dampened when practices and matches were cancelled due to unfortunate rain early in the season. Playing ability steadily improved under the guidance of coach Geraldine Ryberg. Motivated by co-captains Karen Connolly and Gieriet Sullivan, the golfers practiced intently, further refining their games. Low scores from junior Gieriet Sullivan were an asset upon which the team could rely. Combined devotion, support, and ambition crowned the season with success.

Goal-diggers

The Varsity soccer squad's tremendous improvement reflected a year of hard work and determination. At the beginning of the year, the young team's inexperience impeded their progress, but several personnel changes in the starting lineup pumped new life into the team. By the end of the year, the booters' play consistently produced promising results.

The final record of 6-9-0 concealed their ability, for in no game were the Indians decisively outplayed. Midfielder Mike Norehad, fullbacks Tom

Sweet and Dave Bigelow and goalie Willie Burkhardt were the mainstays of the team. Bigelow and Burkhardt anchored a solid defense, while Norehad paced the increasingly productive offense. The rejuvenated scoring power fulfilled coach Tony Schinto's basic but sensible winning philosophy of "We try to score more times than the other team."

Victories over conference foes Evanston, Deerfield and Waukegan West cleared the Indian warpath leading to the playoffs. The team breezed through the subsectionals and did well in the sectionals

The Junior Varsity team enjoyed an outstanding season, finishing at 7-0-3. Coach Earl Schabel's utilization of players at all positions allowed for personal improvement and gave all members of the large squad an opportunity to participate. An undefeated season and first place in the conference were the rewards.

Coach Bob Ward was impressed with the performance of the sophomore team. Good basic soccer skills and steady improvement of the defense keved a winning season for the squad. Its final record stood at a respectable 6-4-3

The Freshman A team experienced a very profitable season also, compiling a 4-4-4 record. Coach John Cadwell credited the team's ball skills, their knowledge of the game, and their ability to play under a team concept as factors of the fine year. Coach Larry Rehage expressed optimism for the Freshman B team. He felt that their final record of 2-3-1 did not express the team's persistence, improvement, and hard work

Net returns

Sparked by the upcoming East-West merger, the girls' tennis team possessed an incredible desire to achieve. Hours of practice and hard work supervised by coaches Mary Jo Herzog and Hughes Davis transformed this initial spark into a healthy flame. Consistency and self-confidence fueled the flame which soon grew into a mighty blaze, scorching one opponent after another. The end of the regular season revealed the smoldering ashes of the six schools which had failed in their attempts to extinguish the fire.

This great success was partially due to the team's depth. It did not rely upon one player for strength but rather maintained excellence throughout the lineup. Going into the Central suburban league meet undefeated, the Indian netters placed first, winning their three doubles matches. Christine Parr, Jenny Nolan, and Susan Goldsmith qualified for State, leading the team to an eleventh place finish. The Indians had made the last New Trier East girls' tennis team a blazing success.

Through excellent teamwork with his fellow racers, the team captures the winning places that are necessary for victory.

The New Trier East boys' cross-country team steadily improved as the season progressed. Captains Jon Shepherd and Dick Stafford, along with senior Steve Shattil, frequently were found leading the pack. Running over rivals Deerfield and Evanston, they led the way to a first place finish in their league and then secured second in their district meet.

Coach Ben Almaguer believed this year's team did well because it had many good runners rather than a few outstanding individuals. Due to New Trier East's depth and the many exceptional harriers at West, Almaguer predicted a phenomenal season next fall.

Goalin' girls

Mindful of the previous state championship, the determined field hockey team strove to defend its prestigious title. As the Indians emerged energetically onto the field, co-captains Nicole Kaminski and Sarah Hart led the way. TEAMWORK became their main objective.

"We do not have any one outstanding player, they are all outstanding," said first year coach Marge Julian. Ten returning varsity players reinforced the strength of the team. Although the cancellation of games early in the season hindered their progress, in later matches the Indians proved that they had retained their skills.

The team's self-motivation, cooperation, and dedication were its finest assets. These attributes, combined with a superior playing ability, resulted in another triumphant year.

At the blast of the starting gun, the New Trier East girl's swim team exploded into another dynamite season. Since this was Eric Matz's last year as coach, the Indian swimmers had additional incentive to achieve excellence. During the summer months, the swimmers worked out twice a day in preparation for their upcoming competitions. As the season commenced, team members rose early for 6:30 practice and returned after school for another two hours of strenuous work. By the time the swimmers had left the halls of New Trier, they had registered over 10,000 yards. Even during the teacher strike, the squad remained undaunted as the captains held practices at Michigan Shores.

The Indian swimmers maintained the tradition of excellence by posting a superb 7-1 dual meet record. Spurred by the leadership of all Americans Betsy Lind, Mary Kelly, and Tana Bowen, the team captured first place in the Cowgirl Relays and second place in the Indian Relays. After defeating arch-rival Maine South, New Trier East cruised to the Central suburban league title. The moment of grandeur came when the Indians defeated perennial power Hinsdale Central in a dual meet for the first time. Although Indian swimmers had dreams of a state title, strong competition prevented this. The team garnered second place honors for the second year in a row, trailing Hinsdale Central by just three points. The state effort was led by Betsy Lind, who set state records in the 50 and 100 free. Mary Kelly turned in stellar performances, placing second in the breast stroke and fourth in the individual medley. Diver Tina McCreary sprang to new heights by finishing second in the state.

Encouraged by the upcoming merger and the return of many Varsity lettermen, the New Trier swimmers look forward to regaining the state title.

Unless one is a member of the boys' swim team, grueling workouts in the New Trier East swimming pool are not part of the school day. Dedication and the desire to perform well are the motivating factors that keep each swimmer grinding through these excruciating exercises. Weekend meets provide him with a chance to display the talents he has developed during the daily practices.

According to coach Eric Matz, the team's depth and its desire to win were keys to the Indian's fine season. Led by Peter Coxon and Scott Fowkes, the swimmers placed first in their division with a 10-1 record and earned a ticket to the district finals. Superior performances by both Coxon and Steve Karlstrud in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle enabled the Indians to take first place in the districts.

Diving coach Arnie Cajet expressed satisfaction over the divers' season. Doug Allen took first place in both the league and the district meets while Shawn Walker captured second in the league and placed seventh in district competition.

The Junior Varsity and Frosh, Soph squads also enjoyed a brilliant year as both teams closed their respective seasons at 11-0. The underclassmen's excellent records demonstrated the tremendous potential of future New Trier teams.

The 1980-1981 season

proved to be rewarding for the New Trier East hockey club. Compiling a record of 16-3-3, the players' matured skills and teamwork led them to place first in the Metro North division. The squad's strengths, according to coach John "Chico" Wallin, were speed and depth. Demonstrating outstanding individual performances, Mark Henderson, Peter Solberg, Tor Solberg, and team captains Bill Nixon and Keith Vosseller were named Divisional All-Stars. Thrashing opponent after opponent, the Indians concluded the season with a richly deserved state tournament crown.

The Junior Varsity squad also enjoyed an impressive season, finishing at 18-1-1. The team's brilliant play exhibited a promising outlook for future years.

Queens of the court

The whistle sounded and the New Trier East girls' basketball team sprang into action. A tip to expectant arms, a pass into waiting hands, and an energetic dribble downcourt carried the ball up through the hoop and resulted in a two-point lead.

Organization and energy carried the varsity team through an exceptionally strong year. With a sturdy framework of returning seniors, the team showed steady improvement over the course of the season. Superb performances included highscoring plays by co-captains Laura Silverstein and Margie Shelton. Guided by the support and encouragement of coach Geraldine Ryberg, the combination of a tenacious defense and a productive offense resulted in strong assaults on opposing teams. An upset victory over highly-ranked Deerfield and a near victory over Niles West highlighted the season.

The Freshman team, under the guidance of coach John Cadwell, earned recognition for its record of 16-2. Influenced by the superb talents of Nancy Leahy and Hillary Graham, the Junior Varsity posted a final record of 15-4. The underclassmen gained valuable experience and sharpened their skills under highly competitive conditions. These improvements assured the continuation of the varsity team's high level performance.

During the season, the team played high school basketball teams in the state of Illinois. The team and its achievement of performing before thousands of people and a state-wide television audience encourages the athletes to develop and perfect their skills. For Coach John Schneider's first Indian crew, this dream became a reality.

As the season began, the team showed immediate promise by winning the Niles West Thanksgiving tournament which included an impressive conquest of powerful Chicago Carver. Undefeated in their first seven games, the Indians began to receive state-wide recognition. However, Evanston tarnished New Trier's perfect record, dropping the Indians from first place. Led by the superb passing skills of Bob Miller and the precise shooting of Dave Curtiss, New Trier rebounded to thrash team after team. Later in the season, the Indians avenged the Evanston loss with a spectacular victory on the Wildkits' home floor and recaptured a share of first place. Disaster struck the following weekend when the weary Indians concluded the regular season with two defeats and a second place finish. On this sorrowful day, they bravely entered the state tournament.

Spirits lifted when the Indians dropped Fox Valley Academy in the opening round of regional play. In a game characterized by tenacious defense, New Trier finally surged ahead with six seconds remaining and a Dave Curtiss eighteen footer. The first East-West cage clash followed three nights later. Blessed with superior strength and shooting, the Indians routed the Cowboys 62 to 48—an official match ending to a spectacular rivalry. Having won their regional, New Trier traveled to Waukegan, East for sectional play where they first encountered the Warriors of Deerfield. Leaving the first half the Indians trailed by as many as ten points, but they regained their shooting prowess in the second half to win 61 to 50. The sectional championship matched New Trier against North Chicago. Contrasting the Deerfield contest, the Indians squandered a fourteen point lead but held on to a win. The victory was Coach Schneter's 400th and earned New Trier a super-sectional confrontation against Evanston at Northwestern's McGaw Hall.

Paced by the scoring of Milhken and Curtiss and the defense of Mike Huff, the Indians prevailed 61-58. Trailing by five at the close of the third quarter, the team found that extra intangible ingredient: COURAGE. They overcame their exhaustion and foul trouble to win impressively, earning New Trier a membership in the state's "elite eight" and a trip downstate for the first time since 1973.

In the opening round of the finals, New Trier faced a dynamic Westinghouse team. Forward Ed Harnev's fifteen-point first-half scoring attack, complemented by center John Gynn's spirited defense sparked the Indians to a twelve point halftime lead. A heart-breaking second half come back by Westinghouse ended New Trier's exceptional season on a somber note, but no one could deny the Indians their accomplishment. From the anticipation of the opening tip-off to the fast-paced tension of the final minutes the New Trier basketball team played the 1981 season with determination and courage.

The Junior Varsity was indicative of the Varsity's strength. A 12-2 record with a division championship revealed an excess of ability and foreshadowed a productive 1982 season. The extraordinary play of John Worthington and Ernie Roth sparked the J.V.'s barrage of victories.

The Sophomores played exceptionally well, finishing with a division leading record of 13-7. With the height of Bill O'Callaghan and leadership from Arthur Peponis, the team played flawless basketball, offering much optimism for next year's varsity.

The Freshman A and B teams spent the year primarily learning the different strategies used by the New Trier coaches. The teams were stocked with talent which, when organized, made them more consistent in the latter part of the season.

Point-counterpoint

Incorporating agility, skill, and coordination, the New Trier fencing team fought its way to a triumphant season. Under the guidance of coach Linda Ambrozik, the fencers attained a commendable season record of 4-3. The young team duelled consistently throughout the long season paced by co-captains Mark Challinor and Fred Rosen. After a strenuous schedule the fencers travelled to the state tournament where they placed second. As a result of their performances, five varsity members were chosen for the Junior Olympics.

The Frosh/Soph team developed their skills also as they fenced to a 4-3 season. The advance of the strong underclassmen and the return of many varsity members secured New Trier a promising fencing future.

Lacrosse Player: "No, I'm playing lacrosse."

Man: "What you doin' with that fish net?"

Lacrosse Player: "This is a lacrosse stick, not a fish net."

Man: "Oh, yeah, lacrosse. That's that crazy game they play back East."

Lacrosse Player: "Lacrosse is not a crazy game. It's a highly competitive and exciting sport."

Lacrosse combines speed, agility, and endurance to produce the "fastest game on two feet." Back East, lacrosse is just as popular as football, basketball, or baseball. Midwesterners, however, are just beginning to realize the full potentials of the sport. With each passing year enthusiasm for lacrosse steadily increases.

Once again, Coach McFadzean's varsity squad, concentrating on basic skills and strategies, maintained the New Trier standard of excellence. The awesome talents of senior starters John O'Rourke, Tor Solberg, Dave Sheehan, and Ken Tyrrell commanded respect from all opponents. Seeking a challenge beyond that offered by local competition, the varsity ventured to South Bend, Indiana, to participate in a tournament. New Trier's impressive record proved that whether played in the East, West, North, or South, there was nothing fishy about lacrosse.

Speed, stamina, and spirit mark the successful wrestler. Not only does the individual develop these skills, but also through hours of conditioning and practice, the outstanding team improves its quality and strength.

Although mainly juniors comprised the Varsity team, enthusiasm compensated for any deficiency in experience. Through zeal and determination the squad secured a respectable 11-7 dual meet record and went on to place third in the districts. The hard work and dedication of senior co-captains Greg Beck and Ron Klein were an inspiration to the team. Ron Klein and Kevin Krause placed third in districts while Stu Bush captured second Heavyweight. Harold Phillips and 167 pound contender Greg Beck won districts and proceeded to sectionals. Qualifying for state competition, Beck finished the season with an impressive record of 29-3.

The JV I and II teams also exhibited prowess on the mat. Led by junior Tim Beck, the JV I team steamrolled its way to a flattering 10-4 season. The JV II also dominated its division accumulating a team record of 11-1. Echoing the spirit of the Varsity and JV, the freshman team displayed great promise for the future.

The highly qualified coaching staff, headed by Peter Galea with assistant coaches Jim Kruempelstaedter, Earl Metzger, and Bob Acri motivated the squad with dynamic instruction. Their ability to fine-tune the grapplers was reflected in the team's outstanding season.

Unparalleled Success

Beaming with success the 1981 girls gymnastic team rarely lost its balance. Concentration and determination accounted for the gymnasts sure-footed performances. The girls attended many long and rigorous practices in order to perfect their skills. Due to these strenuous workouts, they executed their routines with the utmost precision, grace, and finesse.

Outstanding performers included Marv Armstrong in the floor exercise, Kiki Ryan on the bars, Sean Allen on the beam, and Julie Piorkowski on the vault. Leading in the all-around competition was Heather Sipe, whose talent was unsurpassable. She captured first place on the bars at the sectionals and qualified for state competition.

When the team members dynamically displayed their talents opposing teams were confronted with stiff competition. The Indians landed a record of six wins out of ten meets and placed third in the district.

In addition to the varsity's triumphant season, the junior varsity earned a prestigious position in their league, winning seven out of nine meets. These gymnasts demonstrated their ability to maintain the high reputation of varsity performers.

The fiery coach, Gerry Denk, was thrilled with his team's success. He said in retrospect "It was one of my most memorable seasons!"

The kings' court

The royal sport of tennis first developed in Wimbledon, England, as a recreational lawn game. Increasing in power and popularity, tennis smashed into the U.S. and became a sensational hit. As play began demanding more physical strength and mental psyche, competition arose and the royal game hit the New Trier Empire.

The 1981 boys' tennis team demonstrated the imperial skill, crowned strength, and rich experience required to uphold the New Trier Dynasty. Dedicated players combined their talents to secure a foothold in the Central Suburban League North Division. With returning varsity lettermen contributing wisdom from last year's state tournament, the squad gained confidence and strong leadership. Seniors Jon Shepherd, Bill Friend, and Bill Stafeil threatened their match opponents by exhibiting a fine quality of perfected skill while junior Bob Buerger and sophomore Tom Frei displayed outstanding potential for future reigns. With the merging of NTE and NTW, two tennis powers should combine to form a United Kingdom.

After weeks of disciplined practice, New Trier East's girls track team exploded from the starting blocks. The racers spent many months jogging, sprinting, doing "speed-play," and lifting weights in preparation for their series of indoor and outdoor meets. Each runner persevered through the pains and strains of perpetual training and collaborated to form a fast team with a great deal of depth. The time and energy spent paid off with many victories.

The 1981 team surprised numerous rivals who were performing strongly in both distance events and relays. As the season ran its course, the girls took many high places to win close battles. Under the guidance of coaches Chuck Schulz and Bill Stewart, co-captains Sarina Cavalier and Sarah Hart provided the spark necessary for a speedy season. As they approached the finish line, underclassmen were on the heels of the varsity squad and promised to keep pace with excellence next spring.

The great race

It is four o'clock in the afternoon. Most students have already finished the day's routine and gone home. For the Newcastle runner, however, the real work is just beginning. As six o'clock approaches, the silhouette of the lone trackster is visible in the distance. He is competing his rigorous afternoon practice.

Although the 1981 boys' track squad had fewer participants than in past years, the small size enabled them to form a closely knit team. "On the people we have running, complemented coach Len White, we have some outstanding and others. Captains Don Amer and Tom Meyers set a strong and steady pace for the young team. Sprinters and distance runners all pushed themselves to achieve personal goals. Augmented by a strong corps of junior and senior classmates, returning shotputter Brian Braithwaite and teacher Tom Meyers composed the nucleus of the best competitors. As the season drew to a close, the team looked toward next year's NIF/NW merge. With the combined talents of both schools, the squad should increase in numbers, output, and achievements.

The gymnast. He is a distinctive breed of athlete who competes against himself. Reaching for perfection, he tunes his body and learns how to control it with precision. Correlation between his thoughts and his actions is vital. Once he accomplishes this fusion, he manuevers flawlessly upon apparatus and floor.

With the return of many strong seniors, the boys' gymnastics team entered competition with high expectations. Veterans Jon Moretta and Skip Adamson performed excellently upon the highbar, rallying the team to high scores. Solid routines by faithful Indians such as talented ringmen Hobie Kincaid and Mike Tangney gave the team a crucial advantage. The appointment of Coach Denk to next year's head position and impressive performances by sophomores made the future of New Trier gymnastics look bright.

Ever-ready battery

A message to our opponents

We started early and practiced quite late,
Running and hitting 'til our first day at the plate
At first not polished, not quite up to par,
But by our very first game, we were known wide and far

Deerfield and Maine South we'll be looking to upset
And with a squad like ours, we'll beat 'em I'll bet
With just one returning starter, we had to be tough,
But Laura Silverstein and Chris Heeter proved it wasn't that rough

We excelled on the field and then at the plate
And with skills like that, we're goin' down state
So don't say we didn't warn you, we're ready to 'bout
'Cause when you're up against New Trier you're sure to be knocked out'

Men of steal

When March arrives with its warmer breezes and melting temperatures New Trier baseball players grow restless. An announcement in the bulletin, the organizational meetings, strenuous practices, the season has begun. Through the year, game after game the squad toils for victories

Demonstrating speed, skill, and coordination during the arduous summer of 1980, the Indians triumphed continually and finished with an 18-9 record, placing third in the state. The baseball squad maintained its vigor this spring. Providing stoic leadership, tri-captains Morgan Herron, Ron Klein and Ernie Roth inspired their team to successive victories. Coach Ron Klein attributed his team's power not only to the many returning seniors but also to a strong group of juniors and sophomores. By the efforts of all, the baseball team became molded into a fighting machine that won game after game

Meanwhile, the sophomore team demonstrated its prowess by batting its way to a superb season. Looking forward to next year, Coach Klein favors the merger with New Trier West, stating, "It will benefit the team tremendously."

The person is standing in a room, looking down at an object in their hands. In the background, there is a window with multiple panes. The image is somewhat blurry and has a high-contrast, grainy quality.

Since its inception in England, badminton has developed into a demanding sport. The skilled player must possess precise eye-hand coordination, keen reflexes, speed, and agility to send shots flying faster than a speeding bullet. New Trier's top seeded varsity members, Meg Freeman, Cristy Adams, and doubles partners Liz Butler, Sue Campbell, Peggy Maguire, and Chris Renner provided a smashing outlook on a promising season. Pre season conditioning increased each participant's endurance while wind sprints and jogging awakened muscles from long winter naps. Anticipating tough competition from Deerfield, Maine South, and New Trier West, coach Lee Kennicke felt her team had a good chance at winning the conference title. With the onset of spring, training was complete, and interested bird watchers flocked to the gyms for each meet.

"Never the Twain"

The outstanding production "Never the Twain" emanated from the strong efforts of a dedicated group of students. Working diligently throughout the summer under the guidance of director Amy Zeh and co-chairmen Brian Embree and Beth Lane, the 42nd annual performance of Lagniappe satirized next year's East-West merger. The entire cast worked as one unit since there were no lead parts. Co-head Beth Lane explained that "This was a learning experience for the cast members. It enabled them to discover their capabilities and to share them with the audience."

Lagniappe 1990 revolved around an isolated town whose lifestyle was changed by five Boston students. The intruders befriended the citizens, sold illegal products, and competed for the mayor's office. They eventually modernized the town by defeating the corrupted mayor and turning Hoopersville into a tourist attraction.

Avoiding a possible setback by the closing of school, the cast, crew, and orchestra worked long hours in students' homes and church basements to remain on schedule. This endeavor produced captivating entertainment that proved although East is East and West is West, eventually the twain shall meet.

Dance concert

The curtain rose and Dance Concert '81 was cleared for take-off. Dancers eagerly explored the art of creativity, soaring to new heights of originality and vivacity. Captured by the ingenious combination of lively dance and festive music, the audience shared an evening of fascinating entertainment. Having piloted an exceptional performance, the advanced dancers discovered that cooperation enhanced productivity.

Over sixty members performed eleven pieces, accompanied by New Trier East's symphony orchestra. Travelling from the male-female relationships in

"2R1" to the trials and tribulations of friendship in "Plaza Suite," the advanced dancers displayed their diversity. Betzy Ruby refreshed traditional ballet in "Venuti on ice that's nice," while Madeline Bromberg experimented with sharp modern dance in "Kaleidoscopic vision." In the finale, choreographed by faculty sponsors Suzanne Wentz and Christine Fasnacht, the members of the dance composition class received an opportunity to show their individual flair. Melody and mood were cleverly combined, closing the concert with flying colors.

"Mrs. McThing" and "The Boy Friend"

"Mrs. McThing" ****
written by Mary Chase
directed by Kathy Pingle-Powen

Seeking revenge on Mrs. Howard V. Larue III, the magical Mrs. McThing exchanges the young Howard Larue IV for a mild mannered puppet. As a result Mrs. Larue becomes anxious to reclaim her son, realizing just how much she loves and appreciates him. The conflicts that arise between the two mothers and a gang of mobsters create an exciting and surprising series of events.

Only a short time before the first performance, the teachers strike closed the school. With neither faculty direction nor a place to rehearse, it was uncertain whether or not the fall freshman sophomore play would ever be presented. However, the student directors and actors practiced daily to perfect and produce the show. Each performance became an instant success.

"The Boy Friend" ****
written by Sandy Wilson directed by Toby Nicholson

Polly Brown is a sweet, young girl in search of a boy friend to take her to the upcoming costume ball. When the messenger bringing her costume arrives, he and Polly fall instantly in love. Complications result when Polly discovers that her love is actually a millionaire in disguise. Eventually, all is resolved for the better at the masquerade.

The spring "The Boy Friend" showcased superior singing and dancing from the Roaring 20's. A light and humorous spoof of the era, it proved to be most entertaining.

"The Boy Friend," along with "Mrs. McThing," provided the freshman actors with a fine opportunity to reveal and develop their outstanding theatrical talents.

"Plaza Suite"

If the walls of room 719 could talk, people would listen to their tales. A husband admitted an affair to his wife on their twenty-third wedding anniversary; a Hollywood producer seduced his former high school girlfriend; and a couple attempted to talk their marriage-bound daughter out of a locked bathroom. These three one act plays comprised the Neil Simon comedy, "Plaza Suite."

Marv Rvan and Richard Sampson played the two leads in each act. Their ability to change into different characters throughout the play demonstrated their diversity and skill in the acting field. A complete lack of set changes demanded that the actors create new atmospheres through costumes, make-up, and composure. All three episodes dealt with people and their predicaments in a hilarious yet tender way. With one of the smallest casts in recent years, director Dr. Robert Boyle helped create an ambience of touching comedy. Furnished with exemplary acting and solid direction, "Plaza Suite" was structurally sound.

The change of season brought a new setting with the spring play, "Our Town." Directed by Mrs. Suzanne Adams, the play depicted growing up in a small American community. As in "Plaza Suite," "Our Town" overflowed with enthusiasm and talent and was well received by its responsive audience.

A perfect setting

Fleeting shadows make the final adjustments on stage. The lights brighten and the audience turns its focus towards the realistic setting created by the dark figures. The positive reaction of the audience indicated that they appreciated the months of preparation essential for this unveiling.

The actors rehearsed on stage as crew members worked feverishly below. Here they constructed complex sets, including a saloon for the Lagniappe performance "Never the Twain" and a hotel room for the winter play "Plaza Suite." Creative costume design and skilled makeup art enhanced the actor's appearance while a talented lighting crew displayed the actors in their best light. The cooperation of the entire backstage crew provided a refined atmosphere and illustrated their great skill and dedication.

"The Music Man"

The action in the 1981 opera, "The Music Man," began behind the scenes in December with auditions for principal parts. Dedicated singers spent winter vacation learning lines and notes before rehearsals began in January. In class, chorus members prepared important numbers for blocking. The morale of the group rose as each member learned specific movements. As the orchestra, scenery, and costumes were added for the technical and dress rehearsals and finally the performances, the dancers, chorus, and leads fit together like pieces in a puzzle. The finished product captivated each of its five audiences.

"The Music Man" is set in River City, a small town in Iowa. Professor Harold Hill cons the town into buying instruments and uniforms for a boys' band. While convincing the abhorred townspeople of their need for a respectable occupation for their sons, Hill becomes infatuated with the local girl, Marian Paroo. She is a kind-hearted, intelligent young woman who is the daughter of Winthrop, a wealthy man with the swiftest wit. His plot is eventually uncovered, and he is forced to bear to attempt escape out of fear of leaving Marian behind. Before the curtain drops, both the town-people and their audience are delighted with the new boys' band and the whole production.

"A Ripple In Time"

When the 1981 Water Ballet announcement first appeared in the morning bulletin, enthusiasm spread throughout the school. The show started early, beginning with its clinics in January, which all future members were required to attend. As February arrived, the final cast list was posted and constant work both in and out of the pool began. Characterized by motivation, hard work, and persistent determination, the 46 members prepared for two nights of stellar performances.

The new sponsor, Ms. Sammons, senior head, Mary Jane Friedlander, and the entire staff of "A Ripple In Time" set a goal to create the best production ever. The show, choreographed and directed by an all student organization, resulted in dazzling entertainment. Also adding to the excitement were great special effects, hilarious stunts, and terrific props. Intense concentration and precise timing became evident in such acts as "Aquarius," "King Tut," and "Celebration." The crowd's attention was once again captured when the divers displayed elaborate dives from the low and high boards. But the highlights of the evening came when Challen Sullivan exhibited beautiful form in her solo to "Sweet Caroline." Having achieved its goal, the cast looked forward to another impressive performance next year.

All that jazz

For many years New Trier East bands have participated in the festivities, whether sporting events, rallies, or concerts. This year proved to be no exception as the music was superior to the sounds of previous seasons.

The merging of the concert and symphonic bands incorporated a new twist to the format of New Trier's minstrel groups. A powerful, multi-pieced orchestra resulted. Directed by both Ms. Phyllis Clendening and Mr. Joel Streightiff, the band exposed NTE to a taste of culture in the winter and spring festivals. On a similar note the Wind ensemble, directed solely by Mr. Streightiff, had a brilliant second year, assembling the best classical musicians in New Trier.

Under the direction of Ms. Clendening, the Jazz Band furnished a more upbeat style of music. Jazz Night highlighted the season, featuring pianist Mary McPartland as the guest star. Throughout the year NTE's melodious bands continually exhibited noteworthy excellence, thereby maintaining the school spirit.

A pitch in time

Each day, while the orchestra rehearses, the music building were transformed into a concert hall. The members and Mr. Stanley Ackerman strive to achieve the level of excellence that the audiences have grown accustomed to hearing. This sound of music was not only heard in the music building. Under the direction of Mr. Ackerman, the orchestra was extremely active this year. The members highlighted the winter and spring festivals, accompanied the dancers in the winter festival, and gave additional recitals throughout the year. As a finale, the underclassmen played "Pomp and Circumstance" in the graduation program provided many opportunities for musicians of various abilities to perform. Chamber, String, and Symphony Orchestra hit new heights of excellence ending the year on a good note.

For the past ten years, the gymnasts of New Trier's Gymkana Organization have amazed spectators with their exhibitions of bravery and gracefulness. This production, "A Decade of Gymagination," magnificently surpassed all shows in recent years.

Choreographer Mr. Gerald Denk and his troupe tumbled and twirled their way through some of the foremost sequences in Gymagination history. Old regulars, such as "Adagio" and "Flying Fanatics," combined with new acts comprised the show. Highlighting the evening was "Mini-madness Revisited," a scene in which acrobats fly off mini-tramps and barely escape collision. Another up-beat production was a segment dubbed "Gymkana Hopefuls." In this act a group of pre-teens, taught by the show's cast members, displayed their talents by somersaulting and flip-flopping on the maze of mats. The show contained drama, heart-stopping suspense, and its usual brand of comic relief. These three elements made for a breathtaking performance which left the audience hungry for more.

COMMUNICATIONS

COMMUNICATIONS

"Twas the night before deadlines
And all through the school
All creatures were stirring
This was the rule.
The fourth floor was crowded
With people who cared
In hopes that their broadcasts
Soon would be aired.
And out of these efforts
There arose such acclaim
That they knew in a moment
Their works would gain fame.

Writers on the storm

Producing an unsurpassable yearbook became the goal of the energetic Echoes crew. While juniors indexed and typed directories, other staff members brainstormed for new ideas. Work proceeded through the hours as students put finishing touches on stories. At last, final drafts flowed to demanding editors.

Teamwork proved vital as the staff members strove to forge the finished product. The steadiness of the senior editors anchored the creativity of the junior assistants. Meanwhile, photographers applied their inventiveness by portraying exciting new vistas. Sponsor Jeanne Kelly navigated these various talents into productive channels as Editor-in-Chief Chris Dauer piloted the Echoes crew to their distant yet attainable goal.

Deep in the heart of the school, the students of room 1D met their twenty deadlines with success. Assembling the various sections, the staff combined exciting pictures with innovative copy. In early June their dreams finally materialized; Echoes 81 arrived.

Weekend update

Each Friday morning New Trier students anticipated another edition of the New Trier News. Its articles gave students an opportunity to become informed of past and future events. Talented reporters kept students posted on how New Trier athletic teams performed during the previous week, revealed upcoming club activities, and added special features, making the News an outstanding source of information.

The News staff worked seven days every week in order to distribute 3400 newspapers. Wednesday through Friday the News' 29 reporters submitted stories which the entire staff edited. On Saturday and Sunday the sports reporters wrote their stories. The staff then composed headlines and organized the page make-up. On Monday senior editors tacked-up the paper and finally, on Tuesday, they prepared the paste-up and rushed it to the printer.

Editor-in-Chief Jim Roche kept the News room orderly. He and his staff published only first-class articles. Jim's editorials focused on local issues of public concern. As he once said emphatically, 'We're here to produce a quality newspaper that everyone will enjoy.'

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathom'd caves of ocean bear

"Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air
—Thomas Gray

Lyrical poetry, fine prose, interesting photography, and inspiring drawings comprised Inklings, New Trier's creative art and literary magazine

Many talented artists and writers spent long hours carefully perfecting their pieces before submitting them to the Inklings board. Under the leadership of editor-in-chief Maureen Callaghan, this board sifted through the many entries and selected those deemed best in each category. With the arrival of Inklings Day in the spring, copies were made available to the students and faculty so that all were able to view and enjoy the outstanding abilities of those whose work was published in Inklings '81

Thus, through Inklings, the literary and artistic talents of the students—those hidden "gems" and unseen "flowers"—were made known to the entire New Trier community.

Through the Years

For twelve years New Trier's educational television station, ITV, broadcasted efficient, quality programming. This year was no exception. The station broadened its range of services and expanded its scope with the purchase of additional equipment. It provided an educational experience from NTE classes as well as for neighboring elementary schools through the development of instructional films. Utilizing the station's eleven years of experience, the 1980-1981 staff continued to construct and enhance the ITV empire.

Live wires

For your listening pleasure . . . " became the WNTH motto. Talented DJs featured the best of uninterrupted music, news, and sports six days a week. Play-by-play coverage of school athletics, music ranging from classical to progressive rock, up-to-date election returns, and other top notch programming took precedence in the varied schedule. These combinations were made possible through the efforts of dedicated broadcasters, engineers and technicians. The WNTH staff presented its unique format daily under the direction of station manager Tim Nelson. A blend of the creative and the technical formed the frame of 88.1 FM.

Center of attraction

Self direction is one of the most important assets one acquires in high school and uses for the rest of his life. Each student of New Trier East's Center for Self-directed Learning utilizes his sense of self direction to plan and achieve his own education. The freedom of course selection and the absence of grades place the responsibility of learning upon the student.

Center activities encompassed a broad range. Projects included classes, seminars, community learning, experimental learning and independent study. As part of their curriculum, Center students taught or tutored at local schools, worked at hospitals or at lawyers' offices, assisted veterinarians, and viewed court cases. Center students were also offered many courses, such as Chicago Neighborhoods, Dream Analysis, and Astronomy.

Are You A Frosh?

hopefully not. However, each year one fourth of New Trier's population finds itself in the realm of froshdom. Surrounded by new people, these individuals must face endless challenges without the help of old friends lost in the transition. Using his advisor and R & R class as guides, the frosh quickly becomes familiar with New Trier life. Through participation in school activities, he makes new friends, his most valuable asset. As age and experience shape him, the frosh looks toward his future with confidence.

To determine your degree of froshness, study the accompanying picture and rank yourself according to the following scale: 10-12 Ultra Frosh; 7-9 Intermediate Frosh; 4-6 Pseudo Frosh; 3 or less Normal.

Frosh Test

To verify the results of the above Frosh ranking, answer these questions and match your responses to the following scale: 7-8 yes answers Ultra Frosh; 5-6 yes answers Intermediate Frosh; 3-4 yes answers Pseudo Frosh; 2 or less yes answers Normal.

1. Is your locker located in the basement or on the fourth floor?
2. Do you often get lost on your way to class?
3. Do you drop your books often?
4. Do you keep a Guide Book in your locker for daily references?
5. Have you purchased an elevator pass?
6. Do you always hang around with a bunch of friends?
7. To involve yourself, do you participate in 5 or more extracurricular activities?
8. Do you spend all of your free periods giggling in the library?

Sophomores

For many students, the life process is both intimidating and confusing. The present is perhaps undesirable; the future is uncertain. Of the four years at New Trier sophomore year is the least threatening and the most carefree, for it offers little anxiety. Having survived the perils of his freshman year, the sophomore develops a feeling of self confidence and a sense of leadership. Exempt from college testing programs vocational interest surveys and letters from the armed forces, the sophomore releases himself from the uncertainty of post-high school possibilities. Not concerned with what was or what will be, he is free to grow as a person, to follow his interests, and to realize his potential. As he becomes more a part of the intense competition of New Trier, he establishes an identity which reflects his ideals and his capabilities.

The idea of the East West merger captured the interest of all sophomores. Rather than worrying about the merger, however, steering committee strove to make the best of the present. Their goal was to improve relations between themselves and their classmates-to-be. In December the officers of the two schools held a meeting to discuss plans for a student exchange followed by an inter school class party. As a result of hard work and cooperation, both visions became realities. The personal gain of each individual and the accomplishments of the class as a whole made sophomore year a memorable and worthwhile experience.

Juniors

In the course of human events, there comes a time when it becomes necessary for one to break from the bonds of childhood and to assume the responsibilities of an adult. This is junior year: a year of growth. At this time decisions concerning the future become increasingly important. With the help of SAT's and career aptitude tests, the junior paints a picture of his scholastic and vocational talents. College conferences and career modules assist in guiding him in the appropriate direction.

Even though junior year gave rise to many frustrations. Turnabout, Prom, and the Masquerade provided relief. Students utilized their free time constructively with participation in athletic and extracurricular activities. As everlasting friendships were developed, social lives accelerated. With encouragement from parents, teachers, and friends, the junior was able to advance toward a promising future.

Even though we were the last to graduate from NTE, we went first class. Flying high through seventh semester, dreams of college and the summer sun were brewing in our minds. However, for many of us, straight A's declined to new lows with the arrival of senior slump. But just in time to avoid a crash landing, our diplomas gave us the one way ticket we needed to take off on another flight.

The tradition of NTE is more than just academics, athletics, and activities, although it is certainly all of these things. It is intangible — invincible. What makes New Trier East special is the feeling of loyalty and devotion from those who have been there. We, the editors of the last ECHOES, are proud to have been a part of this yearbook which will end a great tradition. It is with sadness and hope that we say good-bye. In doing so we dedicate this issue to all those who have participated in ECHOES both past and present.

We would like to give special thanks to Mrs. Kelly who supported and inspired us in every way.

The Editors, 1981

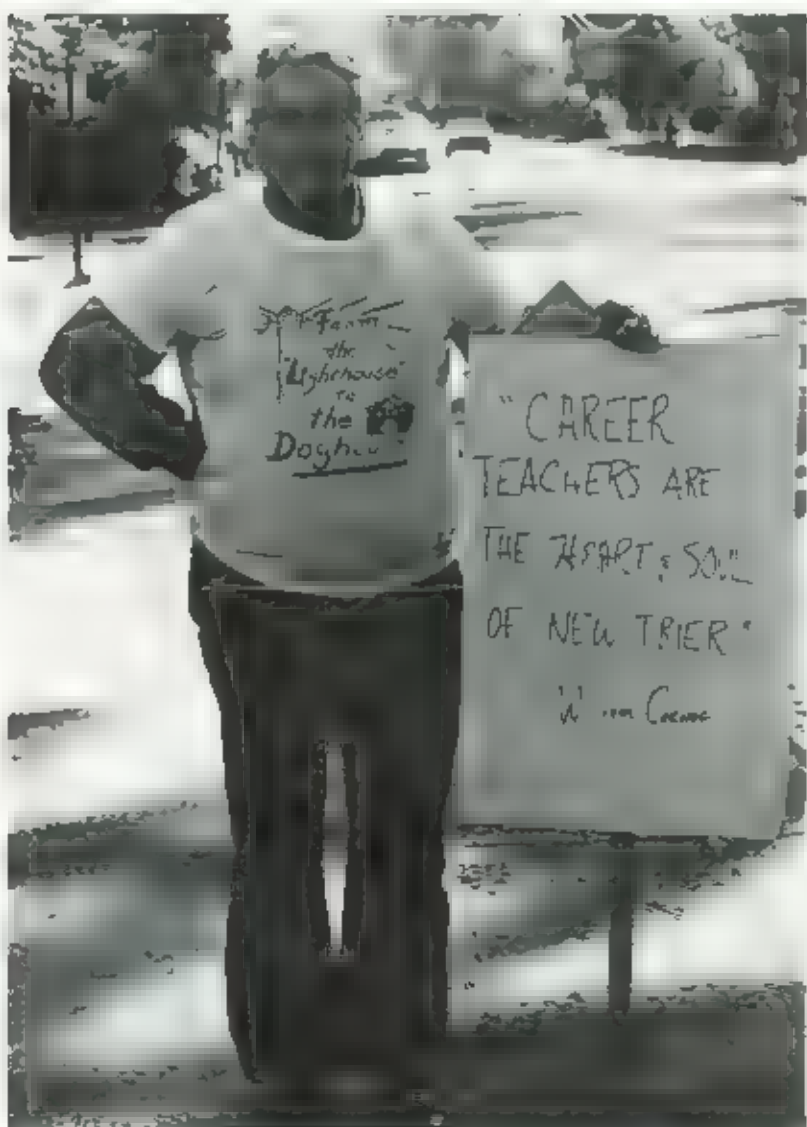

1980-1981 was a year of transition. Teachers tried to strike a bargain with board members while students coasted along the North Shore. When negotiations were over and the fog lifted, New Trier began its struggle to reaffirm itself as a lighthouse school. Just as our country's government shifted to the right, New Trier moved to the East. On campus, sparks flew amid heated arguments over the "New New Trier" colors and mascot. National patriotism flourished with re-charged loyalty to the Red, White, and Blue as the hostages returned home from captivity. Although the year was characterized by turmoil and change, it provided the hearty with a sense of hope for the future.
